Dear James,

Your proposed Breast Cancer Awareness book project has not left my mind since we first discussed it in late August.

Your photographs of other breast cancer survivors are stunning expressions of individuality and self confidence.

After my own surgery, on several occasions I surprised family and friends by baring my chest in answer to their concerned questions about my recovery which had been complicated by a staff infection and a second implant procedure.

That frontal exposure was a healing experience for us all...and I know your book is all about that. In that spirit I would be honored to be one of the women in your book.

Sincerely,

C J
