Dear Mr. Ingraham:

First let me say that it was indeed a pleasure meeting with you on September 19, 2007.

Continuous insight into the world of Breast Cancer has been a true passion for me as I meet women on a daily basis through my profession and or personally.

What struck me in our recent conversation was the fact that others like you carry on this burning passion to help others.

Your idea of interviewing and photographing women that have been diagnosed with breast cancer as well as others who have been affected indirectly to share their stories in the hopes of raising awareness is truly necessary.

I must say that initially when you described the book featuring women "top-free" along with their stories; I could not see how a person without breast cancer posing "top-free" could add any value. But after meeting with you, seeing the pictures and hearing your explanation, I can truly see the value and contribution.

We all play a vital role in educating our communities about the importance of early detection and screening and that breast cancer is curable if detected early.

I am in support of your efforts as well as your book project and I wish you much success with your endeavor.

Dianne Hyman, RN, BSN
